

North West

Hume Valley School celebrates cooking from around the globe

Paula Maud, Hume Leader
July 24, 2017 10:00am

TWENTY-FOUR cultures from Afghanistan to Samoa and Croatia to indigenous Australian, are woven into the recipes and stories in a cookbook launched yesterday at Hume Valley School in Broadmeadows.

Parents shared stories from their childhood and students helped create the recipes for their favourite meals to create What in the World's for dinner?, illustrated by Kid's Own Publishing's artist Phia Larson.

Hume Valley School's community connections co-ordinator Conor Hickey said the book had been a collaboration between Dianella Health, Kid's Own Publishing and the parents and students.

Ms Hickey said Dianella Health's Population Health team had provided funding, as well as guidance on developing culturally inclusive policy and practice for the benefit of students, their families, staff and the whole school community.

Find out more about Hume Valley School at humevalley.vic.edu.au

<http://www.heraldsun.com.au/leader/north-west/hume-valley-school-celebrates-cooking-from-around-the-globe/news-story/4c34a883d69530df35871bf46b2d2da7>